GREENE RIVER
TRAIL

Connection to Greene County History

Because it links together the coal communities of Greene County, the Greene River Trail has close connections to local history. Much of Greene County’s economy has historically been bolstered by the bituminous coal industry, which still has a place in our county today. The trail winds its way along the Monongahela River, and those who use it can imagine coal being ferried up and down the river on barges for use at places like the W. A. Young & Sons Foundry & Machine Shop in Rices Landing. The trail also passes through beautiful wooded areas, which display the true character of Greene County which has been preserved over time.
